The Ego and the Self. Juan Pablo Hern. The etymology of the word ego is simply "I" in Latin. It was used by Latin speakers in the very same way that we use the first person singular nominative case personal pronoun in modern English, which is "I". In present day, we use the word "ego" to make a specific distinction; for example when we wish to address an inflated sense of self-worth, but also to refer to our identity that we have built around ourselves.
