With a gently flowing text (and from a rhythmic consideration actually somewhat and pleasantly reminiscent of the movement of the tides, of ocean currents) Into the Sea (written by Brenda Z. Gulberson and illustrated by Alix Berenzy) traces the life of one sea turtle, from the time she hatches in a sandy beach nest, until she returns, after more than twenty long years in the ocean, to the very beach where she was originally hatched, to lay her own cache of eggs in the sand.

Go throw yourself into the sea (x2)
Though we don't need a mountain moved
We just want to move ourselves
Take us somewhere, take us somewhere, anywhere else
Go throw yourself into the sea

Though the mountains May be moved into the sea
Though the ground beneath Might crumble and give way
I can hear my Father Singing over me
It's gonna be ok
It's gonna be ok.
Bridge 1.
From beginning to the end
You're so close
You have never let me down
And You won't
In the valley in the shadow
I know
You're so close
You're so close.
