Twist, Bend, Reach, Step: A Merce Cunningham Solo Anyone ...

"50 Looks" was a solo constructed from a gamut of fifty still positions. Cunningham used chance to generate a long series of ninety-one of these positions. Due to the nature of chance operations, some of the fifty looks were done multiple times, some were done only once, and a few were not done at all.

Any book that attempts to do justice to the life and creations of an artist as unique as Merce Cunningham is morally obligated to be, at the very least, extraordinary. This fall, Aperture rose to the challenge by publishing Merce Cunningham: Fifty Years ($75), a "chronicle and commentary" by David Vaughan (the Cunningham company's archivist since 1976), edited by Melissa Harris.

For more than 50 years, Merce Cunningham has been a driving force in modern dance. Working with the idea that dance and music should be able to exist independently of each other while sharing the same time and space (a concept developed with longtime musical collaborator and life partner John Cage), and making use of chance in developing choreographic phrases, Cunningham has challenged the way we create and view dance.
