The Jacket

To this end, "The Jacket" represents the apotheosis of this rising genre, and is both an artistic psychological thriller, as well as what you might call a metaphysical tragedy, and easily envelopes the viewer into its morose and sterile world replete with dreary snow scapes, perpetual grey skies and faces, muted and washed out colours, institutional isolation, and the angst of working class loners.

The Jacket (2005) - IMDb

The Jacket is a 2005 American psychological thriller/horror film directed by John Maybury and starring Adrien Brody, Keira Knightley, Kris Kristofferson and Jennifer Jason Leigh. It is partly based on the 1915 Jack London's novel The Star Rover, published in the United Kingdom as The Jacket. Massy Tadjedin wrote the screenplay based on a story by Tom Bleecker and Marc Rocco.

"The Jacket" appears to be a fairly well regarded episode of early Seinfeld and for me this is another case where I simply do not laugh frequently enough during the early stages of the show. Some characters are better sketched out than others by this point (Jerry and George) and others (notably Kramer and Elaine) have yet to find their groove within the structure of the show.
